SECTION C DESCRIPTIONS AND SPECIFICATIONS

C. 1.0 Scope.

Headquarters Marine Corps, Installations & Logistics (I&L), Defense Policy Review Initiative (DPRI) Installations Implementation (LFD) Branch is responsible for the installations policy and program integration for the Defense Policy Review Initiative program. This program covers installations on Japan, Guam, and Hawaii and totals over $40B in facilities costs alone. A major part of this program includes the Environmental Impact Statement and the associated environmental compliance and sustainability programs. LFD Branch is seeking environmental support in the areas of environmental program management and technical guidance related to the overall DPRI program. Additionally, with the development of a new Marine Corps Base on Guam, LFD Branch is seeking facilities planning and engineering support in the areas of program management and technical guidance also related to the DPRI program. The requirement is temporary, expecting to peak over the next 18 months and transition to the field by 2014. Therefore, LFD Branch is seeking a one year contract with 4 1 -year option periods to support the requirement.

C.2.0 Background.

In 2003, the Government of Japan and the U.S. Government partnered to develop and execute a bilateral, strategic approach to posture realignment to ensure an enduring, stable U.S. force presence in Japan that benefits from local and national political support. A key tenet of this approach has been making adjustments to reduce friction with local base-hosting communities while simultaneously strengthening U.S. capabilities and deterrence. The May 2006 Realignment Roadmap with the Government of Japan was developed to achieve the strategic, secure base on which Japan depends and which anchors the U.S. forward presence in Asia -Pacific. As part of the Realignment Roadmap, a plan for the relocation of approximately 8,000 Marines and their dependents to Guam was developed as part of a much broader strategic effort to transform our U.S. -Japan Alliance relationship. A reduced and consolidated presence on Okinawa, and expanded roles and missions, cooperation between U.S. and Japanese forces, are key elements. When all the realignments are complete, the Marine Aircraft Group 36 will relocate operations from the urban Marine Corps Air Station (MCAS) Futenma to a Futenma Replacement Facility (FRF) at Camp Schwab, which is in an area that is much less densely populated. Portions of III Marine Expeditionary Forces (MEF) forces will relocate to Guam, the remaining U.S. forces on Okinawa will consolidate northward, allowing the return of significant land areas in the more populated south. In the process, the Realignment Roadmap keeps 10,000 Marines in Okinawa and more than 3,000 Marines in Iwakuni in an environment of renewed and strengthened political stability. All of these efforts are included in the DPRI program and all require extensive I&L, LFD program support.
