Governmentwide Acquisition Contract

Contract Number: HHSN263999900046I

Delivering Performance and Cost Effective Results for Government CIOs

Today's federal government Chief Information Officer (CIO) plays a major role in helping agencies fulfill their goals, objectives, and mission. Whether implementing the President's Management Agenda initiatives, improving information security, or managing the agency's information technology (IT) portfolio, CIOs confront numerous laws, regulations, and policies that affect their critical role.

To offer assistance geared specifically to the needs of the CIO, the National Institutes of Health (NIH), National Information Technology Acquisitions and Assessment Center (NITAAC), has created a multiple indefinite delivery/indefinite quantity (ID/IQ) contract for acquiring a wide range of IT products, services, and solutions for the institutes and centers of NIH and all other federal agencies. This contract—CIO-SP2i—focuses on proactively addressing issues deemed vital to the federal government, and specifically on supporting the CIO function in its critical role of helping the federal agency executive deliver results (relative to program performance and costs) in the new millennium.

In supporting this vital role, CIO-SP2i offers services that help CIOs implement the ever-evolving acquisition and IT laws, regulations, and policies that are now part of the federal landscape. CIO-SP2i provides its customers with multiple, non-mandatory task/delivery order contracts with improved response time and at equitable and reasonable prices.
