

Financial Management System Improvement

Promoting Responsible Stewardship and Fiscal Accountability Across the Federal Government

Government financial managers face myriad challenges as they strive to maintain compliance with federal legislation and requirements. These challenges include using reliable, accurate, and timely information to provide a better return on investment for taxpayers; delivering better service to customers in new ways; and being accountable to management, Congress, and the public in their stewardship roles. An agency's financial management system is an essential tool for accomplishing these reform mandates.

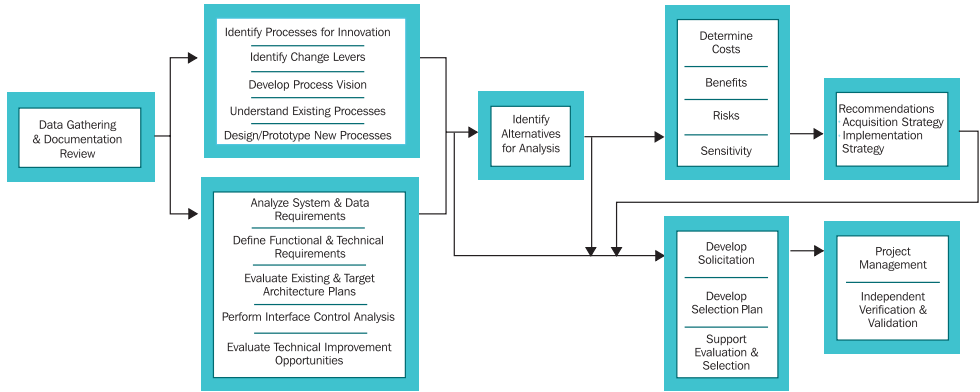

While greater accountability is mandated, agency resources are shrinking. These changes increase the pressure on financial managers to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of their financial operations. However, many federal financial systems use legacy technology, are not integrated, and are in dire need of updating or replacement.

The Booz Allen Advantage
